THE SCIENCE OF _____

“The French, I believe, have agreed on the term ‘aviation’ in case they ever succeed in flying.” — Century Magazine, October 1891

Let’s agree on a word for _____ in case we ever succeed in _____. To the girls who lie down in fields, their bicycles on their sides, too, like horses asleep in the sun, know this: even though _____ is not a science yet, it will be.

When you button your shirt in the morning,
fingers fumbling to fasten the circles,
to thread them through, know that we invented the word for this science from bud, as if a row of tender orchids will soon bloom down your chest, a new branch of botany.

Science of radio, science of sleep, science of kindness, science of the wheel.
One day we will study _____ like we study flight or photography. Let’s agree on this: everything exists on a spectrum, word derived from specter, science of startle, science of the remarkable. Two girls in a field test the science of buttons.
Their shirts soon to break into yellow blooms.

This article is published in Volume 39, Number 2 of Parks Stewardship Forum, 2023.

Parks Stewardship Forum explores innovative thinking and offers enduring perspectives on critical issues of place-based heritage management and stewardship. Interdisciplinary in nature, the journal gathers insights from all fields related to parks, protected/conserved areas, cultural sites, and other place-based forms of conservation. The scope of the journal is international. It is dedicated to the legacy of George Meléndez Wright, a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, and pioneer in conservation of national parks.

Parks Stewardship Forum is published online at <https://escholarship.org/uc/psf> through eScholarship, an open-access publishing platform subsidized by the University of California and managed by the California Digital Library. Open-access publishing serves the missions of the Institute and GWS to share, freely and broadly, research and knowledge produced by and for those who manage parks, protected areas, and cultural sites throughout the world. A version of Parks Stewardship Forum designed for online reading is also available at <https://parks.berkeley.edu/psf>. For information about publishing in PSF, write to psf@georgewright.org.
